INTIMIDATION?

SUING FOR SIGNATURE BEFORE SUBMISSION

If a local media outlet sued for recall petition signatures before they were even submitted, wouldn't their credibility be questioned? (That is, can you sue for names of campaign donors before the finance report is submitted?) And wouldn't this show that the local media outlet is highly biased and, perhaps, on the payroll of a politician via advertising payments?

THREATS OF JOB LOSS OR CONTRACT CANCELLATION

And if you add the aforementioned with reports of a politician threatening those who sign a recall petition the loss of a city contract or being fired from a city job, what would that sound like?

Well, it might sound like voter intimidation. And by both the politician being recalled and the local media outlet who sued for recall petition signatures before submission.
